1 (In open court)

2 THE COURT: Have a seat, everyone. Let me make sure I 3 know who is who.

4 Mr. Frei-Pearson; am I saying it right?

5 MR. FREI-PEARSON: You absolutely are.

6 THE COURT: And Mr. White.

7 MR. WHITE: Yes, your Honor.

8 MR. FREI-PEARSON: Mr. White is not yet admitted, but 9 with your Honor's indulgence, we respectfully request that he be 10 allowed to sit at the table.

11 THE COURT: No problem.

12 MR. FREI-PEARSON: Thank you.

13 THE COURT: But we would be happy to relieve you of 14 your $200 whenever you are ready to get admitted.

15 And Mr. Maatman.

16 MR. MAATMAN: Yes, your Honor.

17 THE COURT: And Mr. Sweeney.

18 MS. SWEENEY: Yes, your Honor.

19 THE COURT: And Ms. Merrill, good morning.

20 MS. MERRILL: Good morning, your Honor.

21 THE COURT: We've got a few motions. There's a motion
22 to transfer, there's a motion for conditional class
23 certification, there's a motion for leave to file a sur-reply, 24 and a potential motion to strike.

25 I think the latter two, I don't need to address

170329durlingD Decision

1 because -- at least not yet.

2 Is there anything anybody wants to add on the transfer 3 motion that's not been covered by the papers?

4 MR. FREI-PEARSON: Your Honor, we're happy to rest on 5 the papers, unless your Honor has questions.

6 MR. MAATMAN: The same would be true for the defense,
7 your Honor.

8 THE COURT: Apart from the open questions regarding the 9 supplemental declarations and all of that, is there anything
10 anybody wants to add on the motion for conditional 11 certification?

12 MR. FREI-PEARSON: No, your Honor. Thank you.

13 THE COURT: All right.

14 MR. MAATMAN: The same would be true for the defense,
15 your Honor. We'll rest on our papers.

16 THE COURT: Let me start with the motion to transfer.
17 The defendant Papa John's International, which I'm going to call 18 PJI, would like to transfer venue to Kentucky.

19 Just by way of background, the named plaintiffs are 20 William Durling, who is a resident of New York, Chris 21 Bellaspica, who is a resident of Pennsylvania, Tom Wolff, who is 22 a resident of New Jersey, Michael Morris, a resident of 23 Delaware, and Richard Sobol, a resident of Kentucky all were 24 delivery drivers in Papa John's pizza stores.

25 The defendant, PJI, is a Delaware corporation with its

170329durlingD

Decision

1 principal place of business in Jeffersontown, Kentucky. The 2 plaintiffs allege that defendant directly or jointly employs 3 21,500 individuals and operates more than 4600 stores worldwide.
4 There are approximately 3,324 Papa John's pizza locations in the 5 U.S, about 700 of which are owned and operated by PJI or PJI and 6 its partners. The remaining locations are franchised. There's 7 about 2,623 franchise locations, which are run by 786 different 8 franchisors; the number of franchisors being smaller than the 9 number of franchisees because some franchisors run multiple 10 stores.

11           There are 145 Papa John's locations in New York, New 12 Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Delaware, all of which are owned and 13 operated by franchisees. There are 97 stores in New York, and 14 of those, 30 are within the Southern District of New York.
15 There are approximately 44 locations in Kentucky, all owned by 16 the defendant or, quote/unquote, "corporate stores," that 17 includes the store that employed Plaintiff Sobol in Kentucky, 18 which defendant directly operates. According to plaintiffs' 19 theory, defendant jointly operates the franchises where the 20 other four plaintiffs worked.

21           Plaintiffs filed the original complaint in this case on 22 May 13 of last year. We had a pre-motion conference on -- let's 23 see. I had a request for a pre-motion conference at the end of 24 June. On July 6, the defendant answered. On July 12, 25 plaintiffs filed an amended complaint. They alleged that they

170329durlingD

Decision

1 were paid well below the minimum wage in violation of the Fair
2 Labor Standards Act or FLSA, 29 U.S. Code, Section 201; New York 3 Labor Law, Article 19, Section 650; and the corresponding 4 minimum wage laws of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware.
5 Kentucky apparently does not have a minimum wage law.

6 Plaintiffs allege that all of these statutes require 7 employers to provide employees with sufficient reimbursement for 8 employment-related expenses, so that the employees get the 9 required minimum wage after such expenses are subtracted from 10 the hourly wage.

11 The plaintiffs, who all delivered pizzas in their own
12 vehicles, allege that defendant systematically under-reimbursed 13 its delivery drivers for vehicular wear and tear, gas, and other 14 driving-related expenses, resulting in the drivers all being 15 paid effectively well below the minimum wage. Plaintiffs 16 further allege that the defendant not only operates its 17 cooperate-owned stores, but is also a joint employer of all of 18 the delivery drivers at the franchised stores, and according to 19 plaintiffs, defendant devised and disseminated the policies and 20 practices that caused drivers at both corporate and franchise 21 stores to be uniformly under-reimbursed. And this is in 22 paragraphs two and three of the amended complaint.

23 In paragraph 41 of the amended complaint, plaintiffs 24 allege in the alternative that the franchisees acted as agents
25 for the defendant, PJI. They base their claims regarding either

170329durlingD

Decision

1 a joint employer or agency, at least in part, on the fact that 2 all Papa John's restaurants, whether owned by defendant or 3 franchised, use PJI's proprietary point-of-sale technology, 4 which I'll call POS technology, to record deliveries made and 5 calculate the number of flat-rate per-delivery reimbursements 6 made to drivers.

7 Plaintiffs allege, by way of example, that the 8 franchisor that employs three of the five named plaintiffs, 9 which was PJPA, they allege that that franchisor paid its 10 delivery drivers $6 an hour, plus $1 per delivery. Using an 11 average of five deliveries per hour, that comes out to $11 an 12 hour, which is what plaintiffs allege is the average hourly 13 wage.

14 Using the IRS standard mileage reimbursement rate and 15 applying it to an average of 5 miles per delivery, plaintiffs 16 assert that they paid $13.50 each hour in out-of-pocket expenses
17 to work as a delivery driver for defendant, resulting in a net
18 loss of $2.50 an hour. They allege that they should have either 19 been paid the IRS rate or that their employer should have kept 20 records justifying what they were paid, neither of which 21 occurred. And they argue that the $1 per delivery was 22 insufficient to offset their expenses, and as a result, they got 23 paid below minimum wage.

24 They seek to represent a nationwide putative class of 25 Papa John's pizza delivery drivers. In their reply papers on

170329durlingD

Decision

1 the motion for a conditional collective action and 2 certification, they proposed to modify the class in response to 3 arguments made by defendant to include only drivers who were 4 reimbursed on a per-delivery basis who are not part of a pending
5 class or conditional action relating to reimbursement, there 6 being a couple of other cases raising similar issues, at least a 7 couple.

8 We had a pre-motion conference on July 13. On July 20, 9 defendant filed the motion to transfer venue to the Western 10 District of Kentucky under 28 U.S. Code 1404(a). On July 21 of 11 last year, a case discovery plan and scheduling order was 12 entered, which called for fact discovery to be complete by July 13 31 of this year and expert discovery by September 25 of this 14 year. On October 14 of last year, plaintiffs filed a motion for 15 conditional certification of an FLSA collective action.

16 Turning first to the motion to transfer venue, under 17 1404(a), I can transfer any civil action to any other district
18 or division where it may have been brought, and whether to do so 19 requires a balancing of conveniences, which is left to my sound 20 discretion. Forjone v. California, 425 F. App'x 73, 74. The 21 inquiry involves two steps: First, I must establish whether the 22 case could have been filed in the transferee district, and then 23 whether the convenience of the parties and the interest of 24 justice favor transfer. See Fuji Photo v. Lexar Media, 415 25 F.Supp.2d 370, 373 (S.D.N.Y. 2006). "[T]he parties seeking

170329durlingD

Decision

1 transfer carries the burden of making out a strong case for 2 transfer." New York Marine v. Lafarge, 599 F.3d 102, 114; and 3 must point to clear and convincing evidence on which the court
4 can base its decision. Lewis-Gursky v. Citigroup, 2015 WL
5 8675449, *2 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 11, 2015).

6 I may consider a number of factors to assess whether a 7 transfer of venue is appropriate, including (1) the plaintiff's 8 choice of forum; (2) the convenience plaintiff witnesses; (3)
9 the location of relevant documents and relative ease of access 10 to sources of proof; (4) the convenience of the parties; (5) the 11 locus of the operative facts; (6) the availability of process to 12 compel the attendance of unwilling witnesses; and (7) the 13 relative means of parties. That's New York Marine, 599 F.3d at 14 112. While the moving party "bears the burden of clearly 15 establishing that these factors favor transfer," Citigroup v.
16 City Holding, 97 F.Supp.2d 549, 561 (S.D.N.Y. 2000), "[d]istrict 17 courts have broad discretion in making determinations of 18 convenience under Section 1404(a), D.H. Blair v. Gottdiener, 462
19 F.3d 95, 106, and "[t]here is no rigid formula for balancing 20 these factors and no single one is determinative," Indian Harbor 21 Insurance v. NL Environmental, 2013 WL 1144800, *5 (S.D.N.Y.
22 Mar. 19, 2013). Trial efficiency and the interest of justice 23 are also important factors in a 1404(a) transfer analysis and 24 may be determinative in a given case. Liberty Mutual v.
25 Fairbanks, 17 F.Supp.3d 385, 397 (S.D.N.Y. 2014).

170329durlingD

Decision

1           Here, there's no dispute that the action could have 2       been brought in the Western District of Kentucky in the first 3       instance, so I will address only the factors regarding whether 4       transfer would be appropriate.

5           First is plaintiffs' choice of forum. That choice is 6       presumptively entitled to substantial deference. Gross v.
7       British Broadcasting Corp., 386 F.3d 224, 230, but in "class 8       actions, less weight is given to the plaintiff's choice," Pace
9       v. Quintanilla, 2013 WL 5405563, at *2 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 23, 10      2013). Affording less deference to representative plaintiffs, 11      however, "does not mean that they are deprived of all difference 12      in their choice of forum," DiRienzo v. Philip Services, 294 F.3d
13      21, 28. In addition, Courts have held that a plaintiff's 14      "choice of forum in an FLSA collective action is entitled to 15      more deference than the choice of forum in Rule 23 national 16      class actions." Koslofsky v. Santaturs, 2011 WL 10894856, at *2 17      (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 18, 2011), which collects cases; see also Flood
18      v. Carson Restaurants, 94 F.Supp.3d 572, 577 (S.D.N.Y. 2015)
19      where the court said, quote, "[T]he opt-in structure of FLSA 20      collective actions strongly suggests that Congress intended to 21      give plaintiffs considerable control over the bringing of an 22      FLSA action. Thus, a plaintiff's choice of forum in an FLSA
23      collective action is entitled to more deference than the choice 24      of forum in Rule 23 national class actions;" but see Earley v.
25      BJ's, 2007 WL 1624757, at *2 (S.D.N.Y. June 4, 2007), a case

170329durlingD

Decision

1 involving alleged FLSA and Pennsylvania minimum wage law
2 violations where the court said that the plaintiff's choice of 3 forum is a less significant consideration in a putative class
4 action than in an individual action, although it did not address
5 whether in FLSA collective plaintiff's choice should get more 6 weight than a Rule 23 class of plaintiff action should.

7 Here, defendant argues in a conclusory fashion that 8 plaintiffs' choice of forum is entitled to little deference
9 because plaintiffs have engaged in forum shopping. Defendant 10 has not pointed to any specific indicia of forum shopping, such 11 as: "attempts to win a tactical advantage resulting from local 12 laws that favor the plaintiff's case, the habitual generosity of 13 juries in the United States or in the forum district, [or] the 14 plaintiff's popularity or the defendant's unpopularity in the 15 region." That's from Iragorri v. United Technologies, 274 F.3d 16 65, 72.

17 Courts do give less weight to a plaintiff's choice of 18 forum where it's not the plaintiff's home forum. Dickerson v.
19 Novartis, 315 F.R.D. 18, 32 (S.D.N.Y. 2016). Here, however, 20 plaintiff Durling is a resident of New York and worked for 21 defendant in this district, and therefore, I find no evidence of 22 forum shopping. And accordingly, the factor of the plaintiffs'
23 choice of forum weighs in favor of keeping the case here.

24 The next factor is the convenience of witnesses and the 25 availability of process to compel the attendance of unwilling

170329durlingD

Decision

1 witnesses.

2 Courts typically regard the convenience of witnesses to 3 be the most important factor, with the convenience of nonparty
4 witnesses given more weight than that of party witnesses. See 5 Mohsen v. Morgan Stanley, 2013 WL 5312525, at *6 (S.D.N.Y.
6 Sept. 23, 2013); and Schauder v. International Knife & Saw, 2003
7 WL 1961611, at *3 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 28, 2003). "When weighing this 8 factor the courts must consider the materiality, nature, and 9 quality of each witness, in addition to the mere number of 10 witnesses in each district." Martignagno v. Merrill Lynch, 2012
11 WL 112246, at *5 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 12, 2012). The transfer 12 analysis also involves consideration of the Court's power to 13 compel attendance of unwilling witnesses, as a district court
14 can only subpoena witnesses in the district, or within 100 miles 15 of it. Mohsen at page 6; see Fed. R. Civ. P. 45.

16 "When a party seeks the transfer on account of the 17 convenience of witnesses under Section 1404(a), he must clearly 18 specify the key witnesses to be called and must make a general 19 statement of what their testimony will cover." ESPN v.
20 Quicksilver, 581 F.Supp.2d 542, 550 (S.D.N.Y. 2008). Defendant 21 has not provided the names of specific witnesses who would be 22 inconvenienced or who the Court would be unable to compel to 23 testify in this district if the case is not transferred.
24 Therefore, defendant has failed to establish that this factor
25 weighs in its favor. See American Eagle Outfitters v. Tala

170329durlingD

Decision

1 Brothers, 457 F.Supp.2d 474, 478-479 (S.D.N.Y. 2006).

2 Plaintiffs say they intend to call more witnesses from 3 New York than Kentucky, although they do not provide specifics
4 either. They note that their likely expert is based in White
5 Plains. Plaintiffs argue there will be "more non-party
6 witnesses in New York than Kentucky because, to the extent
7 testimony from third parties may be relevant to defendant's 8 liability for franchisee-operated stores, those third parties 9 are more numerous in New York and surrounding states than in 10 Kentucky, (which has fewer franchisee-operated stores.)"

11 The defendant notes the vast majority of individuals 12 responsible for maintaining the relevant records and who have 13 knowledge regarding how to capture data and documents from 14 defendant's systems are located in the Western District of 15 Kentucky. In addition, defendants stress that most Papa John's 16 executives currently reside within 100 miles of the Western 17 District of Kentucky, while none reside within 100 miles of the 18 Southern District of New York.

19 While testimony from witnesses at defendant's corporate 20 headquarters in Kentucky will undoubtedly be important, see 21 Martignago v. Merrill Lynch, 2012 WL 112246, at *2 (S.D.N.Y.
22 Jan. 12, 2012), the convenience of such witnesses is not 23 dispositive because the employee of an employer that is involved 24 in litigation is considered available in any venue due to the 25 employer-employee relationship, see SBAV v. Porter Bancorp, 2013

170329durlingD

Decision

1 WL 3467030, at *8 (S.D.N.Y. July 10, 2013); Medien Patent v.
2 Warner Bros., 749 F.Supp.2d 188, 191 (S.D.N.Y. 2010).

3 While policies developed in Kentucky may well be 4 critical to plaintiffs' case, how those policies are implemented
5 in the field also seems relevant. Further, because the putative 6 class includes drivers from at least four states, whether the 7 case proceeds here or in Kentucky, some witnesses will likely be 8 inconvenienced. See Delgado v. Villanueva, 2013 WL 3009649, at 9 *5 (S.D.N.Y. June 18, 2013). In the absence of evidence, the 10 particular witnesses not employed by defendant will be 11 inconvenienced by litigation in the Southern District of New 12 York. This factor is neutral.

13 Next is the location of relevant documents and the 14 relative ease of access to sources of proof.

15 The defendant asserts that the majority of the 16 documents, including defendant's system-wide standards and 17 requirements for franchisees, are created and disseminated out 18 of its corporate headquarters in Kentucky. "[T]he location of 19 documents and records is not a compelling consideration when 20 records are easily portable." Mohsen, 2013 WL 5312525, at *6; 21 see also Morris v. Ernst & Young, 2012 WL 3964744, at *4 22 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 11, 2012) where the Court noted that the 23 location of relevant documents is largely a neutral factor in 24 today's world of faxing, scanning, and e-mailing documents.
25 Even the Court's reference to faxing seems quaint, only five

170329durlingD

Decision

1 years later.

2           The defendant has, quote, "failed to cite specific 3 evidence located [in the potential transferee district] that 4 will be difficult to transfer to New York." Lewis v. C.R.I., 5 2003 WL 1900859, at *3 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 17, 2003). And as 6 plaintiffs point out, defendant's counsel has not expressed any 7 geography-related concerns about producing discovery to 8 plaintiffs' counsel in New York. Because defendant hasn't shown 9 a burden on document production absent a transfer, "its 10 assertion that documents are located in the transferee forum is 11 entitled to little weight." Flood, 94 F.Supp.3d at 578.
12 Therefore, I conclude this factor is also neutral.

13           Next is the convenience of the parties.

14           The starting point in assessing this factor is the 15 residence of the parties or their principal place of business
16 and office locations. See Royal & Sun v. Nippon Express, 2016
17 WL 4523885, at *4 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 8, 2016); and Freeman v.
18 Hoffman-LaRoche, 2007 WL 895282 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 21, 2007).
19 "[T]he convenience of the parties does not favor transfer when 20 it would merely shift any inconvenience from defendant to 21 plaintiff." Kiss My Face Corp. v. Bunting, 2003 WL 22244587, at 22 *3 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2003.)

23           Plaintiff Durling lives in New York, and Bellaspica, 24 Wolff, and Morris respectively live in nearby Pennsylvania, New 25 Jersey, and Delaware. Only Sobol lives in Kentucky on

170329durlingD

Decision

1 plaintiffs' side. Defendant has its principal place of business
2 there. "The convenience of the parties is often connected to 3 the convenience of their respective witnesses," CYI v. Ja-Ru, 4 913 F.Supp.2d 16, 25 (S.D.N.Y. 2012), and as noted above, there 5 is no indication that this district would be particularly 6 inconvenient for the parties' witnesses based on the information 7 I have to date.

8 As plaintiffs note, New York is a major transportation 9 hub and is more easily accessible than Kentucky. Based on the 10 residence of the majority of the named parties, the 11 accessibility of New York, and the lack of information I have 12 regarding potential witnesses as discussed earlier, this factor 13 slightly favors plaintiffs.

14 Next is the locus of operative facts, which is a 15 primary factor in evaluating a motion to transfer because it 16 helps the Court identify a center of gravity and where it should 17 properly proceed. Spiciarich, 2015 WL 4191532, at *6.
18 "[O]perative facts may be found at the locations where employees 19 worked, notwithstanding allegations that a uniform corporate 20 policy caused the FLSA violations." That's Flood, 94 F.Supp.3d
21 at 579; see Bukhari v. Deloitte & Touche, 2012 WL 5904815, at *5
22 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 26, 2012).

23 Defendant argues that this factor weighs in favor
24 transfer because less than 3 percent of the domestic PJI stores 25 are in New York and less than 1 percent of them are in the

170329durlingD

Decision

1 Southern District. These statistics don't persuade me because 2 the defendant has more stores in New York (97) than in Kentucky 3 (44).

4 While the policies underlying the claims may have been 5 formulated in the Western District of Kentucky, although 6 defendants deny this to be the case, plaintiff Durling resides
7 in and was employed by defendant in New York, where at least one 8 of the claims occurred. The practices of franchise locations in 9 Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware will also be at issue in 10 whatever court the case is in front of; therefore, this factor 11 is neutral.

12 Next is the relative means of the parties.

13 "This factor will not weigh in plaintiffs' favor unless 14 they can show that transfer would impose an undue hardship." 15 That's Morris at page 5. "A party arguing for or against 16 transfer because of inadequate means must offer documentation to 17 show the transfer (or lack thereof) would be unduly burdensome
18 to his finances." Federman Associates v. Paradigm Medical, 1997
19 WL 811539, at *4, (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 8, 1997). See Rosen v.
20 Ritz-Carlton, 2015 WL 64736, at *4, (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 5, 2015).

21 Plaintiffs note that defendant is a "publicly-traded 22 company with $1.64 billion in annual sales in 2015" and 23 therefore argues that defendant has vastly more resources than 24 plaintiffs. That is surely true, but that is not the same as 25 plaintiffs being unable to afford to litigate in Kentucky and

170329durlingD

Decision

1 they have not provided any individual financial information.
2 Given, however, that they recently worked delivering pizzas, it 3 is a fairly safe bet that most of them are still relatively 4 low-income earners. Thus, this factor somewhat favors 5 plaintiffs, although not as strongly as it would have if 6 plaintiffs had supplied financial documentation.

7           The next factor is familiarity with governing law.
8 That factor is generally given little weight in federal courts.
9 Flood at 580. Both this Court and courts in the Western 10 District of Kentucky are equally familiar with the FLSA. See 11 Flood at 580; and Rindfleisch v. Gentiva, 752 F.Supp.2d 246, 261 12 (E.D.N.Y. 2010). Kentucky has no minimum wage laws and the 13 claims of at least some plaintiffs will involve the application 14 of New York law, with which this Court is more familiar than 15 courts in Kentucky. See Flood at 580. At the same time, I 16 don't doubt that a Kentucky judge can figure out New York law.

17           While defendant notes that the franchise agreements it 18 enters into are governed by Kentucky law, there are no claims 19 arising under Kentucky law or any reason to believe that the 20 Court will need to interpret Kentucky franchise law; therefore, 21 I conclude on balance this factor weighs slightly against 22 transfer.

23           The last factor is trial efficiency and the interest of 24 justice, which is based on the totality of the circumstances and 25 relates primarily to issues of judicial economy. Dickerson, 315

170329durlingD

Decision

1 F.R.D. at 32. When discovery is at a relatively early stage, it
2 would not be inefficient to transfer. See Freeplay Music v.
3 Gibson Brands, 2016 WL 4097804, at *5 (S.D.N.Y. July 18, 2016).
4 Here, depositions have apparently begun, but there are still 5 several more months of fact discovery, so I would characterize 6 it as a midpoint, but even so, I don't think it would be 7 inefficient to transfer midstream.

8 "Although certainly not decisive, docket conditions or 9 calendar congestion of both transferee and transferor districts 10 is a proper factor." Indian Harbor Insurance v. Factory Mutual
11 Insurance, 419 F.Supp.2d 395, 407 (S.D.N.Y. 2005). Defendant
12 notes that this district has a higher caseload than the Western 13 District of Kentucky and argues that that favors transfer.
14 Judicial economy, although relevant, is insufficient on its own
15 to support a transfer motion. In re Nematron, 30 F.Supp.2d 397, 16 407 (S.D.N.Y. 1998), which collects cases. More fundamentally, 17 while this district has many more cases than the Western 18 District of Kentucky, it also has many more judges, and when 19 defendant's counsel examined the 2015 caseload statistics that 20 they cited in their papers, they might well have noticed that 21 the median disposition time for a Southern District of New York 22 case in 2015 was actually shorter than it was in the Western 23 District of Kentucky.

24 Another factor traditionally considered in deciding 25 whether a transfer is warranted in the interest of justice is

170329durlingD

Decision

1 whether related litigation can be consolidated by transfer.
2 Liberty Mutual v. Fairbanks, 17 F.Supp.3d at 397; see also 3 Everlast v. Ringside, 928 F.Supp.2d 735, 747. Here, while there 4 are similar actions here and there, there doesn't appear to be 5 anything already pending in the Western District of Kentucky
6 that would make it more efficient to have this case proceed
7 there as opposed to here. So, I don't find this factor weighs 8 in favor of transfer.

9 After analyzing all of the relevant factors and the 10 totality of the circumstances, I find that most either weigh 11 against transfer or are neutral; accordingly, the defendant has 12 not met its burden. And for the reasons stated above, the 13 motion to transfer venue is denied, as I predicted it would be.

14 I do note that the defendant, as part of the transfer 15 motion, makes much of the fact that if the plaintiffs were to 16 prevail in this case, this would upend the entire basis of 17 franchising. It may be right the plaintiffs' theory does not 18 hold water with respect to franchises and that the defendant's 19 liability, if any, would be limited to its corporate-owned 20 stores, none of which are in New York. If that's where we end 21 up, a renewed motion to transfer might well be appropriate, but 22 for now, it is denied. And the clerk of court needs to 23 terminate the transfer motion, which is number 42.

24 In connection with whether we have a case that relates 25 only to the corporate stores or to the franchises, I now turn to

170329durlingD

Decision

1 the motion for conditional certification of a collective action.

2 Section 216(b) of the FLSA F.Supp.2d permits, quote, 3 "similarly-situated" employees to maintain collective actions to 4 remedy violations of the statute if such employees "consent in 5 writing." See Flood, 2016 WL 354078, at *2. Potential 6 plaintiffs must "opt-in" to participate in an FLSA collective 7 action. The FLSA does not guarantee an initiating plaintiff a 8 right to obtain a court-ordered notice to potential opt-ins;
9 rather, district courts have discretion to implement Section
10 216(b) by facilitating notice. See Myers v. Hertz, 624 F.3d 11 537, 554.

12 Myers laid out the two-step process the courts in this 13 circuit use to determine whether to certify a collective action.
14 At the first step, plaintiffs must make a, quote, "modest 15 factual showing" that they and other plaintiffs "together were 16 victims of a common policy or plan that violated the law."
17 That's Myers at 555. "If a plaintiff satisfies his 'modest'
18 burden, the court may authorize the plaintiff to send out 19 notices to potential opt-in plaintiffs who may be 'similarly 20 situated' to the named plaintiff with respect to the FLSA
21 violation alleged." Flood at page 2; see Myers at 555.
22 "Although the FLSA itself does not define the term 'similar 23 situated,' courts require that there be a factual nexus between 24 the claims of the named plaintiff or those who have chosen or 25 might potentially choose to opt into the action." Warman v.

170329durlingD

Decision

1 American National Standards Institute, 193 F.Supp.3d 318, 323
2 (S.D.N.Y. 2016).

3 "[C]ourts generally grant conditional certification" 4 because "the determination that the plaintiffs are similarly 5 situated is merely a preliminary one." Jackson v. Bloomberg, 6 298 F.R.D. 152, 158-159 (S.D.N.Y. 2014).

7 In contrast to certification under Rule of Civil 8 Procedure 23, "[u]nder the FLSA, 'conditional certification' 9 does not produce a class with an independent legal status, or 10 join additional parties to the action. The sole consequence of 11 conditional certification is the sending of court-approved 12 written notice to employees who in turn become parties to the 13 collective action only by filing written consent with the 14 court." Genesis Healthcare v. Symczyk, 133 S. Ct. 1523, 1530.
15 "At the second stage, the district court will, on a fuller
16 record, determine whether a so-called 'collective action' may go 17 forward by determining whether [those] who have opted in are in 18 fact 'similarly situated' to the named plaintiffs." Myers at 19 555. "The [c]ourt may decertify the collective action if it 20 determines that the opt-in [P]laintiffs are not in fact 21 similarly situated and the opt in [P]laintiffs' claims will be 22 dismissed without prejudice." Flood at page 2; see Myers at 23 555.

24 "The standard for conditionally certifying a collective 25 is a lenient evidentiary standard." Delaney v. Geisha NYC, 261

170329durlingD

Decision

1 F.R.D. 55, 58 (S.D.N.Y. 2009). "In presenting evidence on the 2 appropriateness of granting collection action status, the 3 plaintiff's burden may be very limited, and require only a 4 modest factual showing, but the burden is not nonexistent and 5 the factual showing, even if modest, must still be based on some 6 substance." Guillen v. Marshalls, 750 F.Supp.2d 469, 480
7 (S.D.N.Y. 2010); see Meyers at 555, where the court said that 8 "The modest factual showing cannot be satisfied simply by 9 unsupported assertions..." "[C]onditional certification may be 10 granted on the basis of the complaint and the plaintiff's own 11 affidavits." Ramos v. Platt, 2014 WL 3639194, at *2 (S.D.N.Y.
12 July 23, 2014); see Alves v. Affiliated Home Care, 2017 WL
13 511836, at *4, (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 8, 2017); Khamsiri v. George &
14 Frank's Japanese Noodle Restaurant, 2012 WL 1981507, at *1, 15 (S.D.N.Y. June 1, 2012). "When there are ambiguities in the 16 papers seeking collective action status, the court must draw all 17 inferences in favor of the plaintiff at the preliminary 18 certification stage." Jeong Woo Kim v. 511 East Fifth Street,
19 LLC, 985 F.Supp.2d 439, 446 (S.D.N.Y. 2013).

20 The defendant argues that because "the parties have 21 conducted significant discovery, the Court should apply a 22 heightened standard in determining whether conditional
23 certification is appropriate." In Korenblum v. Citigroup, 195 24 F.Supp.3d 475, 482 (S.D.N.Y. 2016), the court applied a "modest 25 'plus'" standard for conditional certification where "discovery

170329durlingD

Decision

1 with respect to conditional certification ha[d] been completed."
2 At the time the instant motion was filed in this case, while 3 some discovery had occurred, it was not "significant" and no
4 depositions had been taken. Further, to date, discovery is far
5 from completed. I therefore decline to apply a heightened
6 standard at this stage. See Amador v. Morgan Stanley, 2013 WL
7 494020, at *4 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 7, 2013), where the court noted 8 "[T]he overwhelming case law in this Circuit clearly holds that 9 a heightened standard is not appropriate during the first stage 10 of the conditional certification process and should only be 11 applied once the entirety of discovery has been completed," not 12 just undertaken.

13 So, my role at this stage is simply to determine 14 whether the plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged that they and 15 the other employees in the potential collective were victims of 16 a common compensation policy that violated the FLSA. Jeong Woo
17 Kim at 446. If plaintiffs sufficiently establish that there is 18 a common policy that violated the FLSA, the defendant could 19 theoretically be liable either because (1) it dictated that 20 payment policy for delivery drivers, (2) it is a joint employer 21 of them, or (3) it is an apparent agent of its franchisees.
22 Defendant denies all of the above, but its arguments on this 23 point are premature.

24 Whether the defendant is a joint employer or a 25 parent/agent of its franchisees is a merits issue that I will

170329durlingD

Decision

1 not evaluate at this stage. See Watson v. Jimmy John's, 2015 WL
2 8521293, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 30, 2015); Salomon v. Adderley, 3 847 F.Supp.2d 561, 555 (S.D.N.Y. 2012).

4 For now, I am evaluating whether plaintiffs have 5 sufficiently shown that they, and the members of the proposed 6 collective action, are similarly situated in that they were 7 victims of a common policy or plan that is unlawful under the 8 FLSA. Plaintiffs can do this by demonstrating either that the 9 defendant dictated a payment policy for delivery drivers 10 employed by corporate and franchisee locations, or apart from 11 that, there is a common policy that exists class-wide.

12 Focusing first on the first possibility, the plaintiffs 13 have offered no evidence that defendant dictated the payment
14 policy for delivery drivers at all Papa John's restaurants, 15 including franchises. The defendant has admitted that all 16 delivery drivers that it directly employs are reimbursed on a 17 per-delivery basis, although defendant has not conceded that the 18 per-delivery rate is so low as to violate the FLSA; but in any 19 event, the defendant has also offered evidence showing that 20 defendant is not involved in how franchisees pay their 21 employees.

22 The point of sale or POS technology that plaintiffs 23 rely on as evidence of the defendant's control over franchisees
24 driver payment policy shows that Papa John's locations collected 25 data on the number of deliveries being made, but the mere use of

170329durlingD

Decision

1 the POS system does not show how, or how much, franchisees paid
2 their delivery drivers, and the mere fact of PJI's presumed 3 ability to access that data via the POS system in no way
4 indicates that defendant dictated a nationwide delivery driver 5 payment policy. Maybe plaintiff will come up with such 6 evidence, but so far it hasn't.

7           Turning to the second possible way plaintiffs could 8 establish a common practice in this case, "for purposes of 9 determining the viability of a collective for which conditional
10 certification is sought, the relevant practice that binds FLSA 11 plaintiffs together must be the one that is alleged to have 12 violated the statute itself." See martin v. Sprint, 2016 WL
13 30334, at *6 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 4, 2016). Showing common policies 14 regarding issues unrelated to expense reimbursement, such as 15 wearing similar uniforms, or use of the Papa John's logo, or 16 even the general use of personal vehicles to make deliveries, is 17 not sufficient to demonstrate a common policy with respect to 18 the payment of drivers. See Martin at page 6 where the court
19 said that "[T]he fact of a common job description or a uniform 20 training regiment does not, alone, make those persons subject to 21 it 'similarly situated' under the FLSA."

22           Plaintiffs have shown that there is a policy governing 23 payment of delivery drivers at corporate-owned stores at a rate 24 that results in the drivers receiving less than minimum wage, or 25 at least has made a modest showing to that effect; and that the

170329durlingD

Decision

1 same is true as to two franchisees, specifically, the 2 franchisees that employed Durling and PJPA, the franchisees that 3 employed Wolff and Morris, but such evidence is insufficient to 4 infer a nationwide policy.

5           Oddly, unlike the plaintiffs in Perrin v. Papa John's, 6 09 CV 1135 in the Eastern District of Missouri, whose 7 declarations were attached as Exhibit 1 to Mr. Frei-Pearson's 8 declaration, plaintiffs here do not say in their declarations 9 that the deficit from the insufficient per-delivery fees they 10 received drove their pay below the minimum wage, but assuming 11 that in plaintiffs' favor, all the plaintiffs here have shown is 12 an arguably inadequate corporate policy and an arguably 13 inadequate policy of two franchisees.

14           The amended complaint and the declarations offered by 15 plaintiffs showing the practices of the corporate-owned stores 16 and two franchisees are not enough for me to infer that the 17 other 780-something franchisees have the same common payment 18 policy with respect to delivery drivers.

19           Plaintiffs claim in a conclusory fashion that other 20 franchisees had the same policy but have shown no basis of 21 knowledge of anything occurring beyond their own stores or 22 franchisee. See Guillen, 750 F.Supp.2d at 477, where a motion 23 for certification was denied where the plaintiff had no personal 24 knowledge about how stores other than those at which he worked 25 operated.

170329durlingD

Decision

1           Even taking defendant's declarations into account, they 2 showed that a few more franchisees did not use the IRS rate to 3 reimburse drivers, but there is no evidence that these 4 franchisees do not pay a rate reasonably related to driving and 5 wear and tear costs, or that what they pay is so low that the 6 drivers end up getting less than the minimum wage.

7           Therefore, in the absence of evidence of any direction
8 from defendant to its franchisees regarding how to pay drivers 9 and how much, and recognizing that the burden that plaintiffs 10 bear at this stage is a modest one, I cannot infer from the 11 policy of two franchisees, that nationwide 780-something other 12 franchisees reimburse delivery drivers on a per-delivery basis
13 that results in compensation below the minimum wage. See 14 Brickey v. Dolgencorp., 272 F.R.D. 344, 348 (W.D.N.Y. 2011), 15 which denied a motion for recertification where although the 16 plaintiffs offered some evidence that certain managers flouted 17 the defendant's policies, the plaintiffs did not show that such 18 activity was widespread or common, or that the managers did so 19 because they were told or encouraged to do so by the defendant.

20           Martin v. Sprint, 2016 WL 30334 on which defendant 21 relies, and which plaintiffs do not satisfactorily address, is 22 instructive here. Like this case, Martin is different from the 23 cases on which plaintiff relies where a common practice likely 24 existed because a sole employer was being sued for FLSA 25 violations. See, e.g., Alves, 2017 WL 511836, *1, 4, which

170329durlingD

Decision

1 conditionally certified a class of 30 plaintiffs employed by a
2 single employer where the lead plaintiff submitted a declaration 3 swearing that based on her observations and conversations, the 4 other employees performed similar tasks and were not paid 5 overtime.

6 In Martin, "[t]he declarants collectively represent[ed]
7 employees from only six Sprint partners, two of which [we]re
8 subcontractors of one intermediary, and three of which appeared 9 to be subcontractors of one another." That's Martin at page 9.
10 The Court noted at page 8 that it was questionable whether such 11 a numerically and geographically limited number of declarations
12 would suffice to permit the inference of a unitary practice 13 across all states.

14 In addition to the small subset of the likely sizeable
15 number of Sprint Partners nationwide that the declarants wanted
16 to represent, the Martin court declined to conditionally certify 17 the class because, as in this case, the "plaintiff had not come 18 forward with any evidence that would situate the decision to 19 implement the wage-and-hour practices of which they complained 20 above the level of the declarant's immediate employers or the 21 intermediary companies with which some of those employers
22 contract." That's Martin at page 10.

23 So, Martin is similar to this case in that the 24 plaintiffs all worked for different employers, and it is 25 therefore unlike the cases on which plaintiffs rely. Plaintiffs

170329durlingD

Decision

1 rely most heavily on Ochoa v. McDonald's, 2016 WL 3648550 (N.D.
2 Cal. July 7, 2016) and Watson v. Jimmy John's. Those were both 3 class action cases, but they are not helpful to plaintiff, even 4 on this motion.

5 Ochoa is distinguishable and inapposite because in that 6 case, all of the plaintiffs worked for the same franchisor. See 7 Ochoa at page 1. And there was simply no issue there as to 8 whether there existed a common practice or policy.

9 Watson is similarly unhelpful. There, the issue was 10 whether assistant managers were exempt managerial employees and 11 the court examined whether assistant managers had similar 12 responsibilities across the class. The plaintiffs in Watson
13 supported their motion for a conditional class certification, 14 not only with declarations containing first-hand knowledge from 15 employees spanning 11 locations in seven states, which described 16 nearly identical job duties and responsibilities, and not only 17 with several assistant manager job postings that were also 18 materially identical and supported the inference that there was 19 a common nationwide policy, but plaintiffs also had corporate 20 documentation, including systems, standards, operations,
21 manuals, and trainee materials, that showed that the franchisor
22 dictated the limits of the assistant manager's managerial 23 discretion.

24 Here, where the issue is the method and rate of payment 25 for delivery drivers, plaintiffs have far less evidence;

170329durlingD

Decision

1 specifically, no evidence that defendant dictated or even shaped 2 the relevant payment policy and evidence as to how, and how 3 much, drivers were paid from only two of 786 franchisees.

4 Plaintiffs have not cited, and I have not found, a case
5 certifying a nationwide class involving hundreds of franchisees 6 or subcontractors where the declarations offered describe the 7 policies of only two franchisees or subcontractors, and there is 8 no evidence that the franchisor or general contractor dictated 9 or encouraged the relevant practice.

10 If plaintiffs are correct that defendant has, or has 11 access to, information regarding how all franchisees pay their 12 drivers, or if plaintiffs collects it otherwise through 13 discovery, and if plaintiffs' suspicions, either that the 14 practice is dictated from corporate or that all franchisees do 15 it, or a respectable chunk of them do it, once it gets that 16 information, plaintiffs will be better suited to succeed on a 17 renewed motion.

18 And the converse is true: If further discovery reveals 19 no corporate encouragement of the policy and no reason to 20 believe that it is something that's widespread, then plaintiffs 21 will not be well suited.

22 Plaintiffs in their reply suggested that I could 23 certify a class of just the corporate delivery drivers. I 24 decline to do so now, in part because it seems like there is 25 such a class already certified in the Perrin case, and I'm not

170329durlingD

Decision

1 sure of the status of that case, or whether the policies of 2 which the Perrin plaintiffs complained continued into the 3 timeframe that would be covered by this case; and also because 4 if I am going to have just a corporate class, I may well 5 transfer the case to Kentucky. See Korenblum, 195 F.Supp.3d at 6 488.

7 Recognizing the plaintiffs only have to make a modest 8 factual showing that those employed nationwide as delivery 9 drivers by defendant and defendant's franchisees are 10 similarly-situated and that its plausible that they together
11 were victims of a common policy or plan that violated the law, I 12 find that plaintiffs have not met that burden. Accordingly, the 13 motion for conditional collective action certification is 14 denied, although without prejudice to renewal. And the clerk of 15 court needs to terminate the motion 66, as well as 42.

16 So, we're staying here for the moment, unless 17 plaintiffs really want me to certify a class just of the 18 corporate employees, in which case, I would entertain a renewed 19 motion to transfer.

20 I won't put anybody on the spot to make any decisions 21 like that right now. And plaintiffs, of course, are free to 22 continue with discovery and see if it can gather more evidence.

23 I don't mean to suggest that there's any magic formula 24 of the number of franchisees that have to follow a similar 25 policy. All I'm saying now is that two out of 786 isn't going

170329durlingD

Decision

1 to fly. Whether the right number is 20 or 200, or whether it's 2 some representative sampling of the largest ones, or a sampling
3 of small, medium and large, I don't know. I'm not going to give 4 an advisory opinion.

5 All I can say is, now, I'm not persuaded that just 6 because PJPA and one other franchisee they do this, that 7 everybody does this, but that information may well come to you 8 as discovery proceeds.

9 Is there anything else we should do this morning 10 morning?

11 (No response)

12 I think that moots the motion for leave to file a 13 sur-reply, to strike the declarations, and to file supplemental 14 declarations.

15 Is there anything anyone else wants to discuss at this 16 time?
